The Psychology Program Committee encourages submissions in all areas of psychology. All abstracts submitted and presented should employ gender-inclusive language. Titles should clearly indicate the topic of the paper. Contributions for reporting empirical studies must be based on methods appropriate to psychology as a behavioral, natural, or social science. The context, contribution, and importance of the research as well as the hypothesis or question being investigated should be stated clearly. The principal variables and the research design should also be specified.

Submissions of symposia, panel discussions, and debates are encouraged. In particular, sessions are encouraged that include participation by psychologists and philosophers or that focus on topics of interdisciplinary interest. For symposia or sessions, the organizer should prepare a session abstract, not to exceed two pages, describing the session or symposium theme, content, and importance. All symposium materials, including individual abstracts, should be submitted together and include SYMPOSIUM as a keyword.

Abstracts should be no more than 300 words and include 1) descriptive title, 2) author names and affiliations, and 3) keywords. Paper presentations can be given by faculty, graduate students, and professionals. Student authors must list a faculty advisor. All fields of the submission page must be completed, including whether the author wishes to be considered for a Graduate Student Travel Award or the Griffith Prize.
